Duquesne Light Company Expands Summer Internship Program
Number of Applicants Quadruples

PITTSBURGH – For many college students, summer is a season of job opportunity that will give them valuable experience for their future careers. Duquesne Light Company offers opportunities in many disciplines and continues to expand its internship program launched in 2015. This summer the company welcomed 35 interns after receiving approximately 1,600 applications, four times the number of applicants from 2015. Ten of this year’s interns are returning for their second internship with Duquesne Light.

These interns represent nearly every department across Duquesne Light and come from a wide variety of skills and backgrounds, from engineering and operations to IT and business development. The goal of the program is to provide students with hands-on experience through various work assignments as well as exposure to career paths and leadership opportunities within the company.

“One of our critical goals remains attracting the next generation of top talent to Duquesne Light,” said Todd Faulk, Vice President, Human Resources. “With our formal internship program continuing to expand and become increasingly competitive, we are generating interest from a high caliber of young talent. This in turn better positions us to address future growth and hiring needs.”
